Farm Information

Farm: Los Placeres

The Mierisch family has been farming coffee in Nicaragua for over 100 years. They spend their days in the high mountains of Nicaragua's Matagalpa and Jinotega regions. As a family-run operation, they have produced high quality shade-grown coffee on both sides of their families. Two family stories, that end in coffee farming. Long story short, in the early 1900's Bruno Mierisch worked with his son Wilfrido on the coffee farms. Then Wilfrido worked with his boys on the coffee farms, and today his boys work with their sons and daughters on the coffee farms. Los Placeres has been one of the farms that has shown us that with the good management of the lands, nature can surprise us. In the beginning this farm did not have its own water to carry out agricultural activities, at that time the water had to be sought at a distance of 5 km, to be able to supply the farm for its work, as well as the community. From this a reforestation project is born within the farm, which at the end of year 4 the mountains began to produce water, and this has been one of the greatest challenges achieved, Los Placeres is a farm that today produces its own water thanks to the reforestation in the mountains and in the same way the areas of shade in the coffee plantations were improved, which has allowed the diversification of the varieties that are cultivated today.
